

Fred Barrow

I always have a pencil and sketchbook handy, especially when I am walking in the glorious Devon countryside. I start most of my work drawing a grid and transferring my subject to scale onto the paper or surface that I am using.

My subjects range from pop celebrities to wildlife. Some of the musical heroes of my youth feature in my work. I do like the challenge of creating a likeness.

I like to work on a dark ground, with the image emerging through using white and coloured crayon.

Another interest that crosses over with my art, is walking in the countryside and taking pictures of wildlife. I then use my photography as a reference for my paintings.

I have exhibited with ALP at various exhibitions and received good comments on the detail in my work.

Wolf Moon
White pencil and coloured pencils on Black Paper